

Tuckers Freshman year of high school was a bit hard for him, I work alot and usually leave before school starts when I would leave for work I thought he was old enough and responsible enough to wake himself up for school when he started missing school frequently I started to stay behind and make sure he woke up. By that time he already Couldn't play Football this last year he realized his mistakes and started being more responsible every night he does his homework and we have set rules to ensure he goes to school and keeps his classwork done and grades up. Football is one of tuckers many talents. He has realized his mistakes and has started to improve himself in many ways, I no longer have to wait to go to work or remind him to do his homework. It has always been tuckers dream to play football and he now knows that to play football he has to do well in school also.
