

when I started my freshmen year of High school, I was excited for football and intimidated by the school work, I was never the best student, but at the same time I never really tried. I stopped going to school, and ended up not being able to play football. My sophomore year was terrible. I decided to try and improve my grades last school year to try to achieve my goal of playing the sport I love. I have started to realize that doing good in school gives me a sense of accomplishment, like I said I have no excuses for my actions. Please give me the chance to play my favorite sport, and prove not only to myself, but to you how I have improved and learned from my mistakes.
