To Whom It May Concern:

I'm writing to you on behalf of my son, Jeremy Labrado, concerning his grades from last school year. In my opinion, Jeremy has great potential. This is the first year that he had let his grades slip like he did and I believe he wasn't getting the support he needed. With his dad getting married and moving in with the new family, I think Jeremy didn't know how to react. I know Jeremy and his dad were very close and that seemed to change after his marriage. Jeremy has always been an emotional kid, and taken things personally. When he moved in with his new step-family, he got put down a lot and he let it get to his head.

I will be sitting down with Jeremy and his class advisor and we will find out what he needs to do to make up the credits that he didn't earn last year. Jeremy knows that his sister and I are his biggest supporters and that he can come to us anytime he needs.

I am confident that now that Jeremy lives with me that he will do better. He understands that what he did was not okay and that he needs to stay focused. He has shown that he wants to keep his grades up and correct what he messed up. I believe that as long as he stays focused, he will be successful in reaching his goals.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Nicky Sears
