

To whom it may concern,

My junior year of high school was my hardest year of school. This was due to the fact that I didn't have my one outlet from stress and depression; sports. I had finally hit a point where my principal had kicked me out of school and forced me to go to a mental health facility. He had done this by informing my parents that being in a school environment was unhealthy. At this point, my doctor, psychiatrist, and physician had agreed and sent me there. By this happening, I had fallen behind in school by $\frac{1}{10}$ th of a credit.

Now that I have the chance to start over at a new school and that I have a chance at a hardship, I would like to take this opportunity to get back into sports and use the sports as an outlet to my stress and depression, and to also help me keep my focus on school and what's most important.

Thank-you

A large, stylized handwritten signature in dark ink, consisting of a long horizontal line with a large loop at the beginning and a small flourish at the end.

Christina
Boston