

The reason I didn't pass more than five classes last year was because I started my freshman year skipping lots of classes with friends and thinking I could get away with skipping all the time. So I kept doing it... I wasn't thinking at the time. But this year I thought that I wasn't passing my classes last year so I knew I probably wasn't going to play soccer. My first couple quarters weren't the greatest. So I'm really hoping for a better school year this year. I'm looking for a better start off. Yes, I will have lots to catch up on and stay on track and I know I'm capable of doing it and not listening to the friends that want me skipping with them anymore. So I'm really hoping you'll give me a second chance this year to stay on track with better grades, no skipping, no tardies and coming to all my classes. I'm capable of getting all that done this year.
