The reason I didn't pass my required classes because before I came to North I went to McKay for half of the semester and then my parents transfer me to North and then when I got to go to North everything was different like math they thought math was different than McKay so I was lost like I didn't understand it well so I went to talk to my counselor about math and she changed it to another teacher and I thought it was going to be different way of teaching but it wasn't so I asked for help but I didn't understand it a lot. I would do some of the homework, science it is the class I don't understand at all it's confusing I would do my work but wouldn't get full credit. I felt like at McKay science was easier and the way of teaching. My elective class I was behind it was child development they would give you big projects like my Freshman year I was going through a lot like my mom got surgery on one of her breast cause she had like a ball and then they thought she had breast cancer but then we found out it wasn't cancer and she had to get surgery again cause they found another ball on the same breast and like when I was at school I couldn't really concentrate because I would be thinking about my mom
