

Oregon Medical Group General Release

Date: 5/10/2010

To Whom It May Concern:

CHARLES STAGGS was in our office today for an appointment.

Cole is in the process of evaluation for chronic urticaria and angioedema. He is on two medications that cause sedation and make it difficult for him to think clearly. If he is too sleepy, he may need to miss school. He also may not be able to think clearly enough to perform to his best ability in the classroom and on tests. He will have good days and bad days. Please allow accommodations in the classroom. Please consider him for a 504 plan.

Thank you,

To Whom It May Concern:

Cole is under my care for anxiety and depression. His current severe trigger of anxiety is entering the school classroom. He has been started on medication today. Please continue to work with Cole and his family to find ways to help him attend school in settings that might be less threatening, understanding that some days he might not be able to handle the school setting.

Sincerely,

Rolanda R Everett

In addition, homeschooling or on-line school are not appropriate educational alternatives to an actual classroom education for Cole.
